DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hayashi et al in view of Whitehead et al. Hayashi et al teach the claimed electrophoretic capsules except for showing a gaseous internal phase. Hayashi et al teach a liquid phase. Note that no mention is made of the completeness of filling the capsules with the liquid and some amount of gas would exist in the capsule. The patent to Whitehead et al teaches that a liquid vapor phase exists in the closed vessel in an electrophoretic display and use of the same leads to sharp colors and contrast. In view of this teaching it would have been obvious to modify the Hayashi et al system to also include a vapor liquid phase in the capsules, to enhance the colors and contrast. As per claims 2-5 the use of multiple particles is obvious and conventional given wide use of black and white, etc. in such displays. Use of particular charged particles is an obvious design choice, which is dependent on the end use of the device and the colors and shades desired. Use of carbon dioxide as a gas, as per claim 7 is likewise an obvious choice dependent on the end use of the device. As per claim 8 both cited patents teach electrodes to control the electrophoretic particles.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Liang et al and Ikeda et al are cited for disclosing pertinent electrophoretic display systems.
